Represented by urban researchers and scholars in over 20 countries...

The aims of EURA are:

- 1. To provide a European and interdisciplinary forum to exchange information about and findings from research on towns and cities as the basis for closer co-operation*
- 2. To encourage interdisciplinary and cross-national approaches to research in and education for urban and regional studies as a professional and academic field*
- 3. To bridge the gaps between academic, professional and policy interests, inform public debate and improve the quality of urban policy*

If you have an interest in urban research and endorse EURA's aims, we invite you to join the European Urban Research Association!

Curious about EURA?

In September of 1997, the European Urban Research Association (EURA) was launched at an international conference held in Brussels, Belgium. Inspired by discussions proposing the creation of a new association for urban researchers at an international seminar on 'Shaping the Urban Future' held in Bristol, England, in July 1994, a group of scholars committed themselves to challenging the agenda on urban development and impacts.

Since then...

EURA has and continues to facilitate collaboration in the following forms:

- organizer for over twenty international conferences and workshops
- establishment of the journal Urban Research and Practice that consistently contributes academic research articles along with innovative articles on policy and practice, project reports and book reviews that systematically describe urban issues, urban developments and urban policy & implementation
- international partnerships with organization such as the Association of European Schools of Planning (AESOP), Urban Affairs Association (UAA), EUROLOC and more...
